Renewal and Growth Mark a New Chapter for the Neumann Society

In the past six months, the John von Neumann Computer Society (NJSZT) has undergone significant changes and achieved notable results. This year, the Society is led by Prof. Dr. Levente Kovács, who, upon his election as President and together with the renewed Board, made it clear that the NJSZT brand must be strengthened, the organisation rejuvenated, and its position redefined both in Hungarian society and in the international professional arena.

Hungarian Early PC on Display at the Neumann Society Headquarters

The John von Neumann Computer Society (NJSZT) has recently added remarkable relics to the collection of the IT History Museum Foundation, founded by NJSZT. One of the new pieces, donated by the son of Endre Simonyi – a pioneer of personal computing in Hungary, founder and first president of the Hungarian Computer Constructors' Club (HCC) – was the metal case of one of his father's very first home-built computers, along with the SWTPC CT-64 terminal used with the machine.
